What is the Poirot Score?
The Poirot score does two things:
1. It assigns a confidence rating to what you reading, to make sure that the words are not plagiarized, the website has a good standing, the images are not edited without alerting you, the users on the spam real accounts and not spam or bots.
2. It also will help you learn to see beyond the words on the page.
3. We urge you to not rely on the score as a final stamp, but work with Poirot to become more responsible readers

A comprehensive insight into how we arrive at the final score
1.What is the overall credibility of the website?
2. How much the images are edited
3. What is the proportion of ads to content
4. How and where has it been appeared in same or similar form on the web
5. How many external links it has and what is the general credibility of those websites
6. How many backlinks link back to this page/website and what is their credibility?
7. Are comments made by bots or spammers?
8. When and where was this first published?
9. Has it been factchecked anywhere across the world (where applicable)?
10. What is the overall history of the website (an aggregate based on these parameters?)
However, this explanation is out of scope for this project.

What is the Poirot Score

Poirot helps you be a better judge of what you read. How?

A sentiment level tells you the tone the article is written in

A media score tells you to what degree the image or the videos have been manipulated

A spam score tells you if the user profiles on the page are genuine or no

A website score is the aggregate score of all the pages of a website and allows you to guage the trustworthiness of the site

The first published instance tells you if the content is original and new/updated, so you are directed to original content producers

Fact-checked status aggregates data from myth-busting databases all over so you only read truthful content

Why should you care?

An explanation of how the content industry is undermined by alterations, tweaking, and hiding behind the infrastructure, which makes it very difficult to discern right from wrong, and how Poirot makes visible some of that invisible infrastructure.

How we calculate it

Poirot

How we calculate our score

This would be a comprehensive insight, akin to documentation, into how we arrive at the final score, without revealing trade secrets. This currently includes:

1. The sentiment level of the content driven by sentiment analysis specific to the category of the page content. For instance, a political dictionary of sentiment analysis would not be used to rate a piece on fashion trends
2. How much the images are edited
3. What is the proportion of ads to content
4. How and where has it been appeared in same or similar form on the web
5. How many external links it has and what is the general credibility of those websites
6. How many backlinks link back to this page/website and what is their credibility
7. Are comments made by bots or spammers?
8. When and where was this first published?
9. Has it been factchecked anywhere across the world (where applicable)?
10. What is the overall history of the website (an aggregate based on these parameters?)
